Counselors, Clergy Join to Aid Miners' Families

Counselors and clergy joined to assist families of the men trapped in the Crandall Canyon coal mine near Huntington.

"We're ready if anyone needs to talk," Four Corners Community Behavioral Health Executive Director Jan Bodily said. "Most people are gathering with their families or talking to clergy. But we also have local therapists available."

Bodily has three therapists. Others, including Spanish-speaking counselors, are available from the Division of Child and Family Services in Emery County. The state has approximately 400 certified crisis counselors who can help.

Individuals who want to talk may call the Four Corners Castle Dale office at 435.381.2432.
